

Radish Health Named in BenefitsPRO's Inaugural Luminaries Class of 2022

Radish Health recognized by industry experts as a leading organization working to humanize employer benefits

NEW YORK, NY (Nov. 15, 2022) — Radish Health, an employer health benefit organization that removes barriers to healthcare, reduces costs and improves employee well-being, recently was named an honoree in BenefitPRO's first-ever 2022 Luminaries Class. The program evaluates the degree of impact organizations have on the employer benefits industry. BenefitsPRO is the leading resource for HR professionals, brokers, agents and consultants in the benefits market by delivering exclusive real-world resources, news and information to market players.

Radish Health delivers sustained value to employees through access to convenient and thorough health services through an innovative healthcare platform that encompasses services such as primary care, mental health, nutritional coaching and concierge benefits navigation. A panel of experts selected Radish Health after assessing several key areas, including stated and achieved goals, commitment to the highest ethical standards and influence in modernizing and humanizing employer benefits and healthcare.

"Even those with great employer health insurance benefits are deeply affected by the ongoing provider shortage," said Viral Patel, MD, Founder and CEO of Radish Health. "As employees struggle to find available physicians and mental health therapists or are waiting weeks, if not months, for the first available appointment, their well-being, relationships and productivity deteriorate."

Radish Health's services are also greatly applicable to employees who have high-deductible or high out-of-pocket plans and who might be forgoing care due to overall rising cost increases in both healthcare and everyday life. By deterring emergency department and urgent care visits, offering a model of care that charges low copays per symptom, not visit, and reducing specialist referrals, participants see their overall healthcare costs decrease significantly.

"Employers are looking for ways to provide their staff with the tools to keep them proactively healthy and ensure they have the support they need to thrive during the past few years of crisis and beyond," Dr. Patel says. "That's where Radish Health comes in."

Radish Health partners with municipal governments and mid-size companies to provide every employee with routine access to a provider team that works holistically to improve employee well-being, prevent disease and reduce total healthcare costs. Using a value-based care approach and combining modern technology and tools with the traditional doctor-patient focused relationship, Radish Health removes barriers to care and engages employees in their health — proactive, chronic and otherwise — so they can be informed and active participants in their care journeys.

For more information about Radish Health, visit www.radish.health.

###

About Radish Health

Radish Health is the leading employer comprehensive health benefit program providing every employee with routine access to a provider team working holistically to improve employee wellbeing, prevent disease and reduce total healthcare costs. Utilizing a value-based care approach, each employee has a dedicated primary care physician, mental health therapist, dietician/nutritionist and concierge benefit navigator that's guaranteed to remove the stress and complexity of accessing convenient healthcare. By removing barriers to care, employers can rest assured that their employees have the essential tools they need to be happy, healthy and productive. To learn more about Radish Health, visit: <https://Radish.Health>.

Media Contact

Innsena for Radish

radishhealth@innsena.com